Listen to the text about King Louis IX of France. Fill in the gaps.

Louis IX of France was a _____ and kindhearted king. He cared about all the people in his _____, especially the poor. He often went out dressed in simple clothes and _____ poor people in their houses. The people, of course, loved him and talked to him about their _____. The king ordered his _____ to send plenty of food to all the poor people who didn't have enough to eat.

One day King Louis was visiting a small _____ village. An old lady came out of a small house with a loaf of _____ in her hand. She said to the king, "We are very thankful that you send _____ to people like us. My _____ is ill and can't work any more. But lately, all we've got from your servants is this _____ bread. We are old and our teeth are _____ – we can't eat it."

The king _____ to her and then took the loaf in his hands.

"Yes, this bread is very hard," he said in a _____, angry voice. The old _____ looked down. She thought that the king was _____ at her for asking too much. But in fact, the king was _____ about his servants who had lied to him. He was paying lots of _____ to see that good food was brought to these poor people and all they were getting was hard bread!

The king was still angry when he returned to his _____. He had a very _____ talk with his servants. And from that day on, _____ food was taken to the poor people once again.

So it's quite _____ what an important thing a piece of hard bread can sometimes be.
